As a newly minted L.M.T., I have been busy devouring any information I find regarding my profession. I went to a wonderful school where we were taught some about marketing and had local massage therapists and spa owners come in to speak with us about the industry and our profession. However, I felt the information shared was rather general and was not very helpful if I wanted to seriously pursue my dream of private practice. I decided to open my own practice within a few months of graduating. My former life was spent as a business administrator so I felt confident I could manage my own business. Still, I wanted some validation that I am moving in the correct direction toward a successful career. Being that we are rather solitary professionals, I found it difficult to find the validation I desired. Then I stumbled upon "The Magic Touch: How to make $100,000 per year as a Massage Therapist" and I am so happy I did! Ms. Holub took the bull by the horns and outlined everything a budding massage therapist might want to consider implementing into his or her practice or even one's own professional image. In her book, Ms. Holub shares valuable information gleaned from her own clients. I found that information invaluable and felt good that I was already doing much of what she suggests. She even made me reconsider some of my approaches with clients. I found the information regarding how to break into hotel massage and private practice most insightful. I had already made the decision early on that I would not be interested in pursuing the hotel industry as I am a busy mother of three. However, if I was single and filled with energy I would have considered the hotel industry as a way to build up clientele. If you want information on how to navigate the hotel industry, Ms.
