PLEASE do not "gift" this to your bridesmaids. That shows up a bride as a greedy person whose friendship comes with a price tag attached: "You're a bad friend if you don't do these things for me." The title of "bridezilla" didn't come out of nowhere. Kicking a maid out of your wedding if she can't/doesn't do these things is also a guaranteed way to end the friendship. These books and "lists of duties" should be taken with a HUGE grain of salt. I don't know much about the writer, but I suspect she's either got ties to the wedding industry, or was hoodwinked by industry-sponsored websites. Weddings are a huge industry, and everyone wants a piece of the pie. Dress shops, shoe stores, jewelers, cosmetic technicians, hair salons....anyone who can grab a piece of the industry pie. These people have a financial interest in making the bride believe THIS! IS! THE! MOST! IMPORTANT! DAY! OF! YOUR! LIFE! and it's all about her. They want her friends to believe they're bad friends if they don't purchase matching dresses, shoes, purses, evening wraps and jewelry, and host an expensive shower and bachelorette party. See where I'm going with this? The tradition of bridesmaids is rooted in superstition. A bride's friends accompanied her to church to protect her identity from watching demons, so they couldn't curse her marriage. Over time it evolved into a way to honor special friends and relatives - the folks you wouldn't dream of making this milestone stop in life unless they're by your side. THAT has not changed. Bridesmaid does NOT mean "bride's maid." They are chosen - or SHOULD be - to honor special friends, not to get a free staff.
